

Ribbons & Bows

It was a cold, snowy day outside. Mom had taken the day off work, and Dad had LEFT the office a few hours earlier than usual. It was Christmas Eve, and both of them had LEFT the kids with Grandma, who'd had a little too much eggnog and wasn't in her RIGHT mind.

Once back at home, Mom and Dad got to work RIGHT away setting up the scene for Santa. Mom was wrapping gifts the RIGHT way...but Dad was having a little trouble. It was almost as if he had two LEFT hands!

Mom was placing some tape on a gift when all of a sudden she looked up and yelled, "Oh no! I LEFT all the ribbons and bows at Grandma's house!" Dad put his hands up to his face and cried, "What should we do? Leave again RIGHT now? RIGHT when we're in the middle of wrapping?"

"Yes!" Mom cried. "RIGHT now!" So the two hopped in the car and LEFT as fast as they could. Once at Grandma's, they hopped RIGHT back out of the car and sped through the door. They almost broke it RIGHT down!

Inside Grandma's house, all the kids were laughing uncontrollably. Grandma had LEFT them all in stitches with her eggnog-infused antics. "Oh, back so soon?" She said upon seeing Mom and Dad again. "We were RIGHT at the good part."

The kids weren't too thrilled to see Mom and Dad either. They were much happier earlier in the day when Mom and Dad had LEFT them with Grandma. "We don't want to go home yet!" they all cried. "We're having fun RIGHT here, RIGHT now with Grandma!"

"Don't worry, kids," Mom reassured them. "All I need to do is pick up the pretty Christmas bows and ribbons I LEFT here earlier." She grabbed them from Grandma's cookie counter, where they were sitting just LEFT of the toaster, RIGHT where she'd LEFT them that morning. "They're RIGHT here!" she called from the kitchen.

"Oh thank goodness!" Dad sighed with relief. "It's just not Christmas without pretty bows and ribbons! Am I RIGHT?"

"RIGHT!" everyone said in unison. Even Grandma, who still wasn't quite in her RIGHT mind yet.
